

"BOOST" DINNER GUESTS EAGER FOR PLACES AT TABLE Acceptances for "World's Greatest Workshop" Function Pouring in—Accommodations Limited to 600.

The committee in charge of "The World's Greatest Workshop" dinner to be held in the Manufacturers' Club next Tuesday evening, announced today that accommodations for the dinner have been limited to 600, and all acceptances received after that number has been reached will have to be refused.

The overwhelming response from the leading representatives of the city's banking, manufacturing and maritime interests to the appeal for co-operation in the campaign to advertise Philadelphia at home and abroad as "The World's Greatest Workshop" surprised even the most optimistic members of the committee which has sponsored the movement.

It was first intended to invite 500 representative Philadelphians, captains of industry, transportation chiefs, banking and merchant leaders, to the dinner. Requests for accommodations came so rapidly, however, that all prearranged plans were discarded, and Ernest T. Frigg, chairman of the committee, called a special meeting yesterday afternoon in the Bourse to determine how the situation should be met.

At the meeting yesterday it was explained that the room where the dinner is to be held would accommodate only 600 persons, and for this reason the committee was forced to announce that all acceptances over that number would have to be refused.

The plan for a co-operative movement to exploit Philadelphia's industrial pre-eminence has grown so rapidly that the success of whatever schemes may be agreed upon at the dinner are virtually assured. Representative leaders from every branch of Philadelphia's manifold industries have rallied to the movement, and the leaders in the campaign confidently prophesy that the dinner next Tuesday evening will inaugurate a new commercial era for Philadelphia.

While the committee has been working for more than two months to devise ways and means to conduct the campaign, no details have been made public as yet. A definite program will be adopted at the dinner and the campaign in Philadelphia will be formally launched at that time.

SUFFRAGISTS MAKE FINAL APPEAL TO LEGISLATORS

Lawmakers Bounded Up for Monday's Vote at Harrisburg.

Encouraged by the recent success of the equal suffrage movement in neighboring States, suffragists in Pennsylvania are now making a last effort to reach every legislator at Harrisburg before the vote on the suffrage bill next Monday and to solicit the support of each for the measure. To accomplish this "rounding up" of the lawmakers many prominent suffragists from all sections of the State are now in Harrisburg making a canvass. While their sisters are seeing them personally, other fighters for the "cause" are addressing letters to each, urging them to vote in favor of the measure.

More than 100 letters were mailed today by Mrs. H. Wilfred Lewis, president of the Equal Franchise Society, 33 South 9th street. They read as follows: "This society, representing more than 700 men and women throughout Pennsylvania's Representatives will follow the example of the New York and New Jersey Legislatures in giving a unanimously favorable vote to the woman suffrage bill."

Whether they are successful or not in getting a favorable reception of the bill, suffragists in this city are steadily making plans to increase their strength for a greater fight for the right to vote equally with men. Committees and branches have been formed throughout the city, and are busy at work soliciting new members and supporters. Committees of the Equal Franchise Society on Saturday, February 13, were sent this morning to the offices of the society's various divisions.

Among those to whom these were sent are Miss May K. Flannery, who has charge of the Main Line division; Mrs. M. C. Morgan, in West Philadelphia; Mrs. Harry Lowrey, in the University City division; and Miss Eleanor Goepfert, Mrs. A. M. Sweet, Mrs. F. M. Shepard and Miss Curtis Wagner-Smith. Miss Mary H. Ingram will preside at the meeting.

Dame Fashion will be seen in her latest and most chic styles. The exhibit will consist of a display of styles on living models, the dressing being made in view of the audience by artists from the finest shops of Philadelphia, New York and Baltimore.

TRANSIT PICKLERS' SCHEME EXPOSED

Continued from Page One. The same as it was months ago when the items of the $11,300,000 loan were designated. An item of $500,000 for relocation of sewers in the central section of the city was included only when the Organization leaders saw clear indications of a storm of public protest.

PUBLIC AWARE OF ISSUE. Advocates of the transit plan scoffed today at the indicated intention of the Penrose-McNiel forces to play their obnoxious John P. Connelly, who in turn directs his strategy policy through the influence of followers in the Finance Committee.

It is the contention of the sponsors for transit that the Philadelphia public knows the issue before it and that the public has been educated in the transit project. The $10,000,000 for transit, it is pointed out, is to be borrowed solely on the additional capacity allowed the city by the last Legislature on the assessment of personal property. That amount would be spent over a term of years of actual subway and elevated construction.

The $40,000,000 for sewage disposal would likewise be spent over a term of years and would be borrowed on the capacity allowed by general assessment. The City Controller in his report submitted to Councils at the last meeting fixed the borrowing capacity of the city for all purposes in excess of $47,000,000. Legislation now pending at Harrisburg would increase Philadelphia's borrowing capacity almost to $100,000,000. Even with that "national borrowing capacity" consumed by loans for all contemplated improvements, Philadelphia would still have a net debt far below other cities of comparative importance.

Grounds for borrowing power afforded by the pending legislation at Harrisburg would permit Philadelphia to enter an era of civic development with simultaneous construction of transit and sewage disposal systems and other works of importance. The need of a sewage disposal system, it is pointed out, is not an argument, financial or otherwise, against immediate start of subway work.

Grounds for borrowing power afforded by the pending legislation at Harrisburg would permit Philadelphia to enter an era of civic development with simultaneous construction of transit and sewage disposal systems and other works of importance. The need of a sewage disposal system, it is pointed out, is not an argument, financial or otherwise, against immediate start of subway work.

That measure will allow Philadelphia to start a transit system, a sewage disposal system and other works even though it should pay the total cost of the completed project is appropriated. The increased borrowing capacity of the city would provide the working capital for carrying on the improvement.

Revenues estimated to be available to the city from a completed transit system will be even exceeded by the great revenues from taxation that will follow ready development at the completion of the new highway system. The transit plan will open ready development that will similarly increase assessments and augment constantly the city's borrowing capacity.

TAYLOR ANSWERS OPONENTS.

But Philadelphia will have rapid transit. The "coterie of obstructionists," which has prevented the Finance Committee of Councils from favorably reporting the bill which provides for a special election on the $30,000,000 transit loan, will suffer the consequences of public wrath and be compelled to face the rising of the people such as the city has never witnessed.

These statements, embodied in a vitriolic address made by Director Taylor before the Business Science Club in the Hotel Adelphia last night, were the universal subject of comment in political and business circles today. Director Taylor predicted that the public demonstration would take place within the next few days unless John P. Connelly, the Finance Committee, chairman of the Finance Committee, called a meeting of the board and took action upon the transit measure.

"This uprising," said Director Taylor, "will be one which a certain coterie of obstructionists will have to bear the brunt. These men, moved by subtle influences, subtly asserting, are going to suffer. They cannot thwart the development of rapid transit. I know the temper of the people. They cannot thwart the will of the people.

Then followed a declaration which brought prolonged cheers from the club members: "We are going to have rapid transit."

Not only did Director Taylor score the politicians who are holding up the transit program after it has been endorsed by every business and civic association in the city and by the citizens at large, but he again went deep into the general project of giving the city the finest subway and high-speed surface lines in the country. In touching upon the over-crowded condition of the present system he said:

"Yes, I contend it is absolutely indecent for your wives and daughters to travel, packed in like sardines, with all sorts and kinds of men. If you men are willing to stand it, remember that you owe something to your wives and daughters, the wives and daughters of your friends.

"Do you want to keep your city a city of individual homes or let it become a city of tenements and flats?" he asked. "With 30,000 people coming in each year it's up to you to say."

"This city stands for its contractual obligations with the P. R. T.," he declared. "In urging this plan, I have not insisted that the P. R. T. lose anything by co-operating with the city. But if the city builds these lines, the P. R. T. will be forced to equip and operate them, or go out of business. We will get a company from outside to do it, and you know what the result will be."

HINT AT DEALS. Thoroughly aroused by the def of the Finance Committee, business associations and independent citizens have united in denouncing the attitude of Connelly and Soper. Hints of political deals are openly made. The United Business Men Association is considering the feasibility of calling a mass-meeting similar to that held in the Academy of Music.

Members of the Transportation Committee said today that Mr. Connelly would probably be invited to the meeting to explain to Philadelphia his right to ignore the demands of a million and a half persons.

Summons of new obstruction to the transit program through a suggestion at Harrisburg to make up the deficit in the State's finances by diverting a portion of the personal property tax from the counties, were declared groundless by Senator Sprout. Senator Sprout said such a suggestion had been considered, but when it was pointed out that to divert the personal property assessment from Philadelphia to the State at this time would mean a delay of at least two years in the transit program were, the proposal had been discarded.

TAYLOR ON TAX SCHEME.

When showing a copy of a public report from Harrisburg that an attempt would be made to enact legislation making personal property taxable for State purposes instead of city purposes, Director Taylor said:

"Philadelphians will surely rise up and resist the passage of any bill which may be introduced in the Legislature for the purpose of making personal property taxable for State purposes instead of city purposes. Personal property was made taxable for city purposes by the Legislature in 1913.

"The assessed valuation of taxable personal property thus became an additional basis upon which the city's 7 per cent. borrowing capacity is calculated and by this means the city gained an additional borrowing capacity of over $40,000,000, which is essential to the transit development.

"Philadelphians will remember the difficulty which they had in securing this added borrowing capacity in 1913, and they would not think of giving it up without a vigorous fight.

"I have communicated with Senator Sprout and he has advised me that several methods were under consideration for increasing the State's revenue and that the personal property tax, which now goes to the various counties, was one of the items under discussion, also that it was thought by some that this tax might be diverted to the State. He further stated to me that, in view of the fact that such legislation would deprive Philadelphia of over $40,000,000 of borrowing capacity, and on account of the difficulty of giving it up in other counties, he does not regard the suggested legislation as feasible or advisable and that he does not believe it will ever be seriously considered."

JANGLE OF TELEPHONES AN INCESSANT WARNING TO CHAIRMAN CONNELLY

Philadelphia is beginning to drive home to John P. Connelly the fact that it wants real rapid transit and intends to get it. The chairman of Councils' Finance Committee, guarded by an inscrutable secretary, an office boy that nothing is about, and a doorkeeper who the word "private" stands out like a toll state barring a road, still is being reached by Philadelphians.

The incessant call for rapid transit is penetrating the city's elaborate system of protection and privacy developed by American business men that John P. Connelly was adopted in his 15th floor office in the Land Title Building. It is the kind of a call that wears down obstacles.

The scene in Connelly's outer office, where an EVENING LEDGER reporter waited 15 minutes seeking information from Mr. Connelly, affords a good idea of the temper of Philadelphia on transit. In those 15 minutes no less than 24 telephone calls were counted.

The young man who went beyond his hours. He may talk to strangers, but he says nothing. Already he is developing the armor of inscrutability, worked to the nth power by his employer. Yet the office boy still endures and he is not over supplied with patience.

The jangle of the telephone bells when the EVENING LEDGER reporter entered was incessant. The office boy was doing his best to answer the calls. The secretary was assisting him, but two persons cannot talk over three telephones at the same time and listen also to the inquiries of callers.

Frantically in handling the callers has made the office boy proficient. Several times he picked up two at once, one to each ear, shouting a "Hello" for both. Naturally he got muddled when the parties on the wire both started to talk at once. What they said he would not tell, of course.

And still the nerve-jarring jangle of the bells kept up. Most of the calls were headed off. Some of the more insistent callers wrangled with the boy and by main force of argument got past him. The call was switched to the inner office. Connelly was stricken at Philadelphia had reached him, driving past the whole system of defense.

The demand of the citizens for action by Connelly on transit might be likened to the progress of a rising flood. Thrown back at first, it returns irresistibly, patiently seeking out the weak spot in the defense and eventually finding it. So Philadelphians are finding Connelly. He is beginning to realize the magnitude of the storm he has provoked, a storm that is growing steadily.

LAUGHTER NEARLY SPOILS TOM THUMB MOCK WEDDING

Children Take Part in Ceremony at Narberth.

A 3-year-old bridesmaid at a "wedding" at Narberth convulsed the 400 guests with laughter and nearly broke up the ceremony last night.

The "wedding" was a Tom Thumb affair given at Elm Hall under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Narberth Presbyterian Church. Miss Cynthia Smith, a 3-year-old "bride" wore a bridal veil and was "married" to "Billy" Henderson, 3 years old, by the "Rev." Randolph Miller, 8 years old.

Sixty children took part in the affair, and everything went as per program until Miss May Stone, one of the "bridesmaids" became annoyed with her long train, which twined about her feet, and raised it nearly to her knees to prevent it from tripping her.

When this occurred the ceremony was going on, and the guests laughed so heartily that it was with difficulty that the "minister" could make himself heard. Little Keith Able and William Barker did their best to preserve order while the wedding was being held, but their antics only added to the amusement of the affair.

Five-year-old Stanton Nickerson was the "father" of the bride and gave her away, and "Billy" Caldwell was the best man and marched up to the minister with the "bride" on his arm. Dorothy Jacoby was "matron of honor" while Dorothy Braden Marie Wentz and Louise Smedley were the "bridesmaids."

Students to Hear Dr. Fry. Lutheran Theological Seminars Accompany Him to Reading.

Many students attending the Lutheran Theological Seminary at Mount Airy left for Reading today to hear the Rev. Dr. Jacob Fry deliver a sermon tomorrow in the Trinity Lutheran Church of that city. Fifty years ago Doctor Fry preached his introductory sermon in Reading.

Before Doctor Fry came associated with the Lutheran Theological Seminary, he occupied the pulpit in the Trinity Lutheran Church. The Rev. Dr. J. J. Kuending, of St. John's Lutheran Church, Reading, and the Rev. J. W. Early will assist at the service. These two clerics, Lutheran Doctor Fry represent 170 years' service in the ministry and a combined age of 245 years.

WILSON TO SPEAK HERE

President Will Address 4000 New Citizens in April.

Mayor Blankenburg has received from President Wilson a letter of acceptance to the invitation to address a welcome to 4000 aliens who will become American citizens in Philadelphia in April. The letter confirms the verbal acceptance of Philadelphians who called on him at the White House, last week.

"My Dear Mr. Mayor—I am very much honored by your kind letter of January 20 and by the visit of the committee of Philadelphians who came to me the other day.

"As I told them, I certainly shall try to make it possible to be present at the meeting in April at which you plan to induct the new citizens into their new relationship to the rest of us. I shall look forward to the occasion with the greatest interest. Cordially and sincerely yours, "WOODROW WILSON."

DEFENDS COLLEGE ATHLETICS

President of Lehigh University Addresses Alumni Club Here.

Dr. Henry S. Drinker, president of Lehigh University, is a warm defender of college athletics, which, in his opinion, is an essential feature of the educational program. Dr. Drinker was the principal speaker at the annual dinner of the Philadelphia Lehigh Alumni Club in Knickerbocker last night.

"I believe thoroughly in the promotion of an athletic spirit in an educational institution," said Doctor Drinker. "The day has come when educators recognize that developing the body is as important as training the mind."

Dr. Henry R. Price, a trustee of the college; H. Retter, physical director; W. S. Franklin, Dr. Charles L. Doolittle and Wilmer Crowell, football coach, also addressed the alumni. Seventy-five persons were present.

OPERATE ON ROY MACK

Baseball Leader's Son Stricken With Appendicitis.

Connie Mack's face never wore so worried a look in a world's series game as it did this morning as he watched Dr. George W. Scholler, of 124 Lehigh avenue, successfully perform an operation on Roy, his youngest son, for appendicitis.

While the surgeon and his assistants were working over the young man in the operating room of the Jewish Hospital, the baseball leader and his wife watched every detail of the operation. Doctor Scholler said the patient was in good condition late this afternoon.

Young Mack was stricken at Worcester Academy, Mass., where he is preparing for college. He was rushed to this city. He lives with his parents at 219 West Ontario street.

INOCULATED AGAINST COLD

Inoculation for immunity against cold in the head and as a cure for ringworm has been achieved with success, according to Dr. George M. Coates, who read a paper last night at the meeting of the Southeast Branch of the County Medical Society.

The serum was made from a number of different types of germs found in the patient during such attacks and was administered in three doses during a period of one week. Dr. A. Stricker announced good results by inoculating patients against ringworm.
